Practice

Litigation

Ken is a litigator with extensive experience in a broad range of civil and criminal matters. He represents clients in a wide range of business, construction, commercial real estate and brokerage disputes, as well as trusts and estates, employment and insurance coverage litigation matters.

Previously in his career, Ken served as a Senior Assistant District Attorney in the Office of the Rockland County District Attorney. In that capacity, he prosecuted white-collar criminal and consumer fraud cases, and went on to serve as the County's chief narcotics prosecutor.

Following his tenure as a prosecutor, Ken practiced at one of New Jersey's premier law firms and handled diverse civil and criminal matters ranging from complex corporate and commercial disputes to internal corporate investigations. Thereafter, he served as Vice President and Deputy General Counsel for a publicly traded government contractor. He represented the company in diverse contract and construction litigation, administrative and regulatory matters throughout the country, and he was also responsible for various aspects of project development. Ken was a founding partner of Brown, Moskowitz & Kallen, P.C., which combined with Stevens & Lee in 2025.
